CLINT COOK

CC BUILDERS

CC Builders adds to the splendor of Jackson Hole with stunning custom residential projects that speak to the firm's experience and craftsmanship.

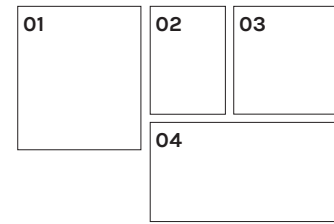

The wisdom that comes with running a successful custom residential construction business for more than 35 years informs Clint Cook to study the past in order to look to the future. The founder of CC Builders in Teton County references the building techniques and natural products that allow classic works to stand the test of time—while keeping one eye on the cutting-edge advances that continue to improve efficiency and reduce waste. “I try to keep an open mind to new trends, while reminding myself that new isn’t always better,” says Cook, who launched his firm in 1981. The same thoughtfulness and professionalism that CC Builders brings to its original projects in and around Jackson Hole extends to the accessibility and communication that often turns clients into lifelong friends. These are the stamps—experience, craftsmanship and customer service—that Cook and his staff of supervisors, master carpenters, masons and steelworkers place on each unique project. “I’m very proud of the highly competent, hardworking, organized, creative and cooperative team we’ve put together,”

“The high quality, attention to detail and the beauty of our homes promote our company more than anything else.”

Cook says. “This has resulted in a rewarding process for the homeowner, a gorgeous, one-of-a-kind home and lasting relationships for all involved.” Working amid the backdrops of natural beauty that define the region, CC Builders specializes in custom projects that celebrate those majestic views, incorporating elements such as ponds, streams and waterfalls. One project took Cook to Durango, Colorado, where he and his family purchased a historic apple and pear orchard overlooking the Narrow Gauge Railroad and built a five-bedroom B&B with six guest cabins.

BUILT TO LAST

He brings that same sense of adventure to the luxury homes his team completes, a process enhanced by the vast library of vendors and material suppliers with which the firm has long-standing relationships. “We enjoy all types of home construction, from log to contemporary,” Cook says. “I like the challenge of complex designs, researching and locating unusual materials from all over the world, and integrating them into a home that fulfills my client’s dreams.” Each home is a testament to the personality and specifications of the client, and shows the versatility of CC Builders. “I’ve been told that when someone tours the interior and exterior of one of our homes, they get a distinct sense of high-quality perfection. That’s our goal—and our signature.”
